Ms. Jinky Song Cervical Cancer Stage 3

JOSE R. REYES MEMORIAL MEDICAL CENTER
DEPARTMENT OF NUCLEAR MEDICINE

WHOLE BODY BONE SCAN REPORT

DATE: 1 July 15, 2022
HOSPITAL NO.: 201803106-0PT
NAME: SONG, JINKY A.
AGE: 57 Y
RADIOPHARM: Tc-99m HDP
ACTIVITY: 120 mCi
REQUESTING M.D.: Dr. Dindrah Alina C. Salvador

CLINICAL DATA:
The patient is a known case of Cervical Cancer stage IIIb, S/P biopsy (2018), S/P 5 cycles of chemotherapy 5/7-30 fractions of conventional radiotherapy plus 8 sessions of brachytherapy (2018). Bone scan was requested for bone metastasis work-up.

CONSULTATION REPORT:
Whole-body bone scan using Tc-99m HDP in anterior and posterior projections, with additional views of the head, thorax, and pelvis was performed 2 hours after radiotracer injection.

This study shows good skeletal labeling with bilaterally functioning kidneys.

Foci of increased radiotracer uptake is noted in the bilateral ilioacral joint (right more than the left), considerations include inflammatory vs metastatic process.

The moderately increased radiotracer accumulation on the lower cervical spine and bilateral knees are most likely from an arthritic process.

The rest of the skeletal structures show symmetrical and physiologic radiotracer uptake.

CONCLUSION:
➢ BONE METASTASIS MAY BE CONSIDERED
➢ FOR RADIOLOGIC CORRELATION AND CLOSE FOLLOW UP
➢ MAY REPEAT BONE SCAN AFTER 6 MONTHS

CLINICAL DATA:
The patient is a known case of Cervical Cancer stage IIIb, S/P biopsy (2018), S/P 5 cycles of chemotherapy (2018), S/P 25 fractions of conventional radiotherapy plus 4 sessions of surveillance.

CONSULTATION REPORT:
Whole-body bone scan using Tc-99m HDP in anterior and posterior projections, with additional views of the head, thorax, and pelvis was performed 2 hours after radiotracer injection.

This study shows good skeletal labeling with bilaterally functioning kidneys.

Follow-up (2nd) whole body bone scan after an interval of 6 months (July 13, 2022) shows no significant interval change.

The previously noted foci of moderately increased radiotracer uptake noted on bilateral ilioacral joints (right more than the left) are still appreciated with no change in size and intensity.

The moderately increased radiotracer accumulation on the lower cervical spine and bilateral shoulders, knees and ankle joints are most likely from an arthritic process.

The rest of the skeletal structures show symmetrical and physiologic radiotracer uptake.

CONCLUSION:
➢ STABLE OSTEOLYTIC ACTIVITY AS DESCRIBED
➢ NO DEFINITE SCINTIGRAPHIC EVIDENCE OF BONE METASTASIS AT THE TIME OF EXAMINATION

Diagnosed with Cervical Cancer stage 3 with bone metastasis as reflected on her CT scan result. She was advised to retake the CT scan after 6 months, and while waiting she tried to take Fulgent Placenta and M3 Factor. After the 6 months her 2nd CT scan result was surprisingly good: stable and no more trace of bone metastasis.
